What has people going gaga over such a series? It's part science fiction, part paranormal, and a little bit spiritual, tying the real world to a new world that goes far beyond mankind's comprehension. Along with the truly unique plotline are other aspects: this web series will be available to anyone in the world, all that is required is an internet connection. The show is one of very few television series that has been filmed entirely in the Denver area. The Producer and co-creator, Kasha Fauscett, is female, which is something rare in the current day and age of Hollywood productions. The interesting factor is this plotline came to her intuitively.

Inner Dimension is now in post production with the first 12 episodes. The official release for the show will be at Comic Con in Denver June 13th -15th. Fans are lining up to meet and greet the cast and crew as well as catch a glimpse of the highly anticipated first 3 episodes. Along with the screenings, the cast and crew will hold a Q&A session with panels and fans will have a chance to grab some incredible giveaways. The Cast and Crew will also be available for interviews during the Comic Con event.

Although the production is local, the cast and crew led by Kasha Fauscett come from a diverse background in the film industry. The newest additions to the team include, Hollywood editor, Mark Farago, who worked for Europe's largest TV Network as an editor, and Denver composer, Mark D'Errico. The core Inner Dimension team consists of Denver residents and filmmakers, Troy Fauscett, Sam Wickey, Steve Meyers and Ketrick "Jazz" Copeland.

So what exactly is Inner Dimension about? The story begins as three people go missing in the real world and find themselves in a new world where the danger is yet unknown and escape may be the least of their worries. As this new world is accidentally discovered by more people, the story grows into something incredible, leading up to a thrilling conflict putting not only the Earth at stake, but the entire universe. This core concept is what is driving fans to line up and sign up for more Inner Dimension.
